

THE ASSOCIATION OF BALTIMORE
The Association of Baltimore has formed an association for the purpose of securing the improvement of the colored population of that city, and has opened an office in No. 8, 4 in the Bible House of that city. The Association has established in Baltimore thirteen schools, with near two thousand scholars, and in the various counties of the state eighteen schools, with about twelve hundred scholars. Slavery having been abolished in Maryland, it would be natural to expect that the industrial status of the State, and especially the clergy, would cooperate zealously and heartily in such an association. But alas! the spirit of slavery still lives in Maryland, manifesting itself either in open opposition or sullen indifference to all measures for the improvement of those who wear a black skin.

The school-houses have been burned in five or six different places. The teachers were obliged to fly, or to suffer what we had formerly by this time was impossible in free Maryland—the brutality of an ignorant mob.

"By the light of five or six blazing school-houses and churches, no clergyman on the Bay Shore, so far as it has come to the knowledge of the Association, has seen his way clear to plead from his pulpit for benevolence and kindness, much less justice, toward these afflicted and now persecuted people."

"The Association has in Baltimore, been refused, because of the reproach of its work, one Christian meeting-house in which to hold its anniversary, and out of two hundred and fifty private notes sent to the respective clergymen of this city, requesting their co-operation in our labors, twenty-three only replied, though replies were requested, of which replies were favorable, and the others either unfavorable or so warily worded that one could understand whether the writer would do anything or not."

TWO NAMES AND ONE WIFE.
A newspaper correspondent visiting Jackson, Miss., writes:

When we went up to visit the Capitol on the morning after our arrival, we found a colored sentinel pacing back and forth in front of the main entrance, clad in a clean blue dress-coat, buttoned up to the chin with bright polished brass buttons, white cotton gloves upon his hands, a new paper collar of the sweetest pattern around his ebony neck, his shoes blackened and polished, and the brasses of his accoutrements as bright as though they had just come from the finishing room, and the barrel of his musket glistening in the rays of the sun that stole in through the luxuriant foliage of the shade and ornamental trees. "Sergeant-at-arms," suggested a friend, "this air is an ordinal of the guard," replied a colored soldier, rising up from his seat on the Capitol steps, and bringing up his musket quickly to shoulder. "I am corporal of the guard, sir." "You have charge of the State House, Corporal?" "Yes, sir." "How do you like soldiering, Corporal?" "Very well, sir; we all like it much better than working in the cotton field. It makes me proud, sir; to think that the great government of this country took us from the field and gave us guns, and two names and one wife."

The majority of these men had no other than given names when enlisted, and the enrolling officers usually gave them a new name, sometimes using the surname of their late master.

GEORGIA.
The Daily News has a letter from a friend at Macon, Georgia, who, with reference to the recent election in that State, exclaims:

"It is a remarkable fact that no man who systematically opposed the South in her late struggle has been honored with any office of importance since the failure of the Confederacy. The reason for this is plain: it is impossible for a man holding to Massachusetts ideas of government to represent the people of Georgia. Such men will always be defeated, and they ought to be."

"That depends," if none but Rebels are allowed to vote, it is safe to conclude that none but rebels will be elected."

A SIGNIFICANT PHRASE.
Somebody said of Buchanan: "The old scamp," he sat at Washington for four years like a bread poultice, and drew the rebellion to a head." "Somebody" did not hide his light under a bushel. It is simple justice to Mr. Buchanan to say that a more apt and perfect comparison has never been instituted. What a fate for an ex-President! To go down to history as the "Bread Poultice of the Rebellion."

SAYINGS OF JOSH BILLINGS.
It is highly important that when a man makes up his mind to become a rascal, he would examine himself closely, and see if he ain't better constituted for a fool."

I argy in this way—if a man is right, he can't be too radical; if he is wrong, he can't be too conservative."

When you pra, pra right at the bull's eye. It is a very delicate job to forgive a man without lowering him in his own estimation, and yurce too."

It is admitted now by everybody, that the man who can git on to berony sassage, has got a good deal of dorg in him. No man lives to get beat, but it is better to be bored with a inch organ than a gimblet."

Don't mist-ke arrogance for wisdom; munny people thought they waze wize when they waze only windy."

Man ain't apt to get kicked out of good society for ben rich."

The road to Ruin is always keptin good repair, and the taverns pay the expense or it."

The onla profit there is in keepin more than one dorg, is what you can make on his board."

Young man, study Differance; it is the best card in the pack."

Honesty is the poor man's pork and the rich man's pudding."

There is a luxury in sometimes feeling lonesom."

It is not always the cheapest insurance that is the best. Good security, policies correctly worded, and a good knowledge of the law, are essential for the benefit of all parties interested. It is not surprising that Home Agents who have experience in underwriting and the business of traveling agents who come along, find that what insurance they pay, they get out of it when the risk is over.

When you want insurance all right, call on CAMFIELD, who will fix you out a Policy anytime, for Life, Fire, Marine, or any other kind of insurance.
